Welcome to the New Zealand Family Violence Clearinghouse

The New Zealand Family Violence Clearinghouse is your national centre for research and information on family and whānau violence in Aotearoa New Zealand. We provide information and resources for people working towards the elimination of family violence. The Clearinghouse is based at the School of Population Health, University of Auckland.

Message from the Co-Directors

*Family violence is a long-standing and complex problem. It has contributing factors from multiple levels of society. Family violence is preventable, however this will require long-term commitment and sustained action across many sectors. Along the way, we will continue to need high quality responses to those who have experienced violence, and those who have

Alcohol and other drugs and family violence: a selected bibliography (March 2015)

Alcohol and family violence

New Zealand Violence Against Women survey

Problem alcohol consumption:

- “In the past 12 months, have you experienced any of the following problems, related to your drinking?"
  - Money problems
  - Health problems
  - Conflict with family or friends
  - Problems with authorities
  - Other, specify”

- Similar question asked concerning partner’s alcohol consumption (or most recent partner if no longer with a partner).
Problem alcohol consumption associated with:

- Lifetime experience of intimate partner violence;
- Current experience of intimate partner violence (stronger association than previous experience) (both partners’ consumption);
- His use of violence (his consumption);
- Her use of violence outside of a violent episode (both partners’ consumption).

Similar findings evident from other countries that have used the WHO VAW survey.
Possible mechanisms for involvement

- Self medication to cope with trauma of abuse (victims)
- ↑ risk of victimisation (victims)
  - ↓ capacity to perceive & respond to risk
- Impact on problem solving ability (victims & perpetrators)
